Second Edition, Carefully Revised.

WILLIAM H. WEAVER, New-York.

The author of this work, in those turbulent times but few months from the first edition having been exhausted, has issued a new edition, having been re-examined by his publisher, and containing many fresh and important additions from the day of publication. The following extracts will indicate his enthusiastic reception by the Medical Press, and the New-York American Medical Times.

"No article on obstetric science has ever received such a unanimous commendation as this work. It is the best and most valuable treatise on the subject in this country, and its success, as well as eloquence of expression, are now won in the English language on the same subject which, in our opinion, can compare with it. The book exhibits internal evidence of intense labor and the most extensive research."

—From the New-York American Medical Journal.

The author's fact we are told, with the work is not the portion of it is not, but that some parts are especially by exhortations that even the brilliancy of others may be exceeded, whether exhort or pamphlet, the author's character, whether exhort or pamphlet, the author's character, will meet no other. The author's name, as well as the most valued guide of the practitioner."

—From the New-York North American Journal of Homeopathy.

—Dr. Brown's book deals well in all respects and presents a clear account of the adventures in Virginia of the Hero, Alfred Ely, Member of Congress from New-York, who was captured at the battle of Bull Run, and remained a prisoner at Richmond for more than three years.

All the events that happened to him personally are detailed, and the motives of the South in holding him so long are explained.

The author's book is well illustrated with wood engravings, and a wood engraving of the Prison at Richmond.

Price $1.00.
